

Press Cutting:

The Software Bureau
DM Weekly
28th July 2008

 DM WEEKLY

IN ASSOCIATION WITH THE DMA

The weekly newsletter for direct marketing professionals

This Week | 28 Jul 2008 RSS

Clients call for suppression reform

Top client companies, including Amnesty International and Help the Aged, are calling for the industry to adopt suppression best practice – including the launch of a new logo for mailings – in a move that has gained the support from industry body DMA (UK).

28 Jul 2008 | > More

Report praises 'relevant and informative' customer magazines

Customer magazines are the most relevant and informative form of direct marketing, according to a new report.

28 Jul 2008 | > More

Real Madrid adopts mobile to reach UK fanbase

Real Madrid is investing in a raft of new mobile marketing initiatives to enable UK fans to support the football club from this country.

28 Jul 2008 | > More

Let us target your audience.

CLICK HERE

PR Jobs

Home

News

In-depth Analysis

DM Campaign of the Week

Search

About us

Contact us

Feedback

Registration

DM WEEKLY

Clients call for suppression reform

Author: Sara Kimberley | Published: 28 July 2008 00:00

Top client companies, including Amnesty International and Help the Aged, are calling for the industry to adopt suppression best practice – including the launch of a new logo for mailings – in a move that has gained the support from industry body DMA (UK).

The initiative, proposed by The Software Bureau, aims to make suppression best practice an industry standard with an accredited logo, which, in time, will become part of the DMA code of practice.

mad.co.uk

CITRIX online

The scheme is designed to clamp down on incorrect and poorly targeted direct mail and promote the importance of suppression to enable consumers to see how responsible mailers are.

Amnesty database marketing manager Nick Mason says: "The organisations that are mailing responsibly and going to adequate lengths to keep their data clean will welcome the standard, and it will expose those who aren't taking suppression seriously."

"I'm sick of seeing the whole sector taking a battering because of the actions of a few, and I think a standard would promote the importance of suppression and enable consumers to see how responsible the majority of mailers are."

"Anything that shows the sector is prepared to act to improve the image of direct mail, one of its most profitable channels, has to be a good thing."

The Software Bureau client services director Mark Dobson says to adhere to the standard all organisations processing mailing data files would need to pass an accreditation process and the organisations responsible for initiating the campaigns would need to demonstrate that they use only accredited bureaux.

He comments: "Direct marketing has come under the microscope like never before, and like most sector-tainting issues, the actions of a few tarnish the reputations of many and we must act now if this valuable channel is to be saved."

The DMA has welcomed the move and believes suppression best practice would be good for the industry.

DMA director of consumer services Mike Lordan says: "There is a need for a suppression best practice and some sort of kitemark for environmental factors, as well as data protection issues. It is definitely something we'll consider."

